

Freie Universitaet Berlin International Master's Programs 2010 – Call for Applications

Do you want to enhance your career with a web-based Master's program in International Relations or East European Studies? The Center for Global Politics seeks qualified candidates interested in advancing their prospects on the global job market.

Hosted by the Freie Universitaet Berlin's Center for Global Politics, and directed by Prof. Klaus Segbers, the two award-winning M.A. programs in East European Studies and International Relations use blended study formats, combining in-house and online sessions. Each degree confers 120 ECTS credits. Applications for fall 2010 are now being accepted.

Program Highlights

- English language coursework within an international student and alumni community
- Web-based learning environment enabling students to stay on the job while working towards their degree
- Rewarding in-house classes in Berlin, Germany, featuring experts and decision makers
- Renowned faculty from a broad array of international academic organizations
- Networking platform with international faculty, fellow students, and alumni
- Professional supervision and individual feedback

East European Studies Online (www.ees-online.org)

E.U. expansion and rapid political, social and economic changes mark some of the latest developments in the dynamic region of Eastern Europe and provide the background for East European Studies Online. The accredited interdisciplinary M.A. program prepares students for high-level Eastern Europe-related assignments in business, media, non-governmental and international organizations, and the public sector. East European Studies Online was recently named one of the Top Ten International Master's Degree Courses in Germany.

International Relations Online (www.ir-online.org)

With globalization on the rise and a multitude of issues affecting today's world politics, individuals with international expertise and a thorough understanding of global political, economic, and communication processes are in high demand. Candidates in the M.A. program gain in-depth, analytical knowledge of International Relations and global politics, enabling them to tackle global issues with a balance of hard and soft-skills. The degree provides candidates with top-tier academic credentials for the international job market.

Application Requirements

- Undergraduate degree or equivalent
- English language proficiency
- Prior professional experience

Online applications are welcome through April 30, 2010, late applications may be accepted, at www.ir-online.org and www.ees-online.org. Programs start in October 2010.

Please visit our websites or contact us at ees@fu-berlin.de or IROnline@fu-berlin.de.